

The Suite Life of Zack and Cody was put on hiatus in the Autumn of 2006 (September 28th, specifically), immediately after the last episode was filmed. This group's owners are "war veterans" of the hugely successful Save Kim Possible and Save Phil of the Future campaign, and know that if we carry over the same creed - persistence, hope, and, of course, peskiness - we can push Disney to get the Suite Life out of hiatus and renew the show for a third season.

It's crucial that we start the fight before the show airs the very final episodes. Because Disney hasn't officially announced the hiatus of this show, many fans won't believe us and won't help. Of course, like any 'crazy' mission, this is to be expected. But consider the following: it's been nearly a year since the first episodes of the second season. If this show were anything like That's So Raven or Hannah Montana, it surely would have had a "third season" announcement by now - fishy, hmm?

It is Save Disney Show's undying belief that having a policy of just sixty-five episodes (which the Suite Life happens to have gone on hiatus after) stifles creativity in addition to being grossly unfair to the fans. That's why the movement continues to ask Disney to formally renounce this informal 65 episode rule - starting with the Suite Life.

A show's fate should be determined by the fans, not a "soulless" company. As long as the Suite Life is popular it deserves to continue on in production. And we invite everyone who enjoys this show (from preteens to adults) to join our cause. The fight for season three will be a long and hard one, but if we start now and keep at it, we will win - no questions asked.

Save The Suite Life of Zack and Cody! ~ STSL.org

Brought to you by SaveDisneyShows.org - Preserving the past to protect the Future!

The Suite Life of Zack and Cody was put on hiatus in the Autumn of 2006 (September 28th, specifically), immediately after the last episode was filmed. This group's owners are "war veterans" of the hugely successful Save Kim Possible and Save Phil of the Future campaign, and know that if we carry over the same creed - persistence, hope, and, of course, peskiness - we can push Disney to get the Suite Life out of hiatus and renew the show for a third season.

It's crucial that we start the fight before the show airs the very final episodes. Because Disney hasn't officially announced the hiatus of this show, many fans won't believe us and won't help. Of course, like any 'crazy' mission, this is to be expected. But consider the following: it's been nearly a year since the first episodes of the second season. If this show were anything like That's So Raven or Hannah Montana, it surely would have had a "third season" announcement by now - fishy, hmm?

It is Save Disney Show's undying belief that having a policy of just sixty-five episodes (which the Suite Life happens to have gone on hiatus after) stifles creativity in addition to being grossly unfair to the fans. That's why the movement continues to ask Disney to formally renounce this informal 65 episode rule - starting with the Suite Life.

A show's fate should be determined by the fans, not a "soulless" company. As long as the Suite Life is popular it deserves to continue on in production. And we invite everyone who enjoys this show (from preteens to adults) to join our cause. The fight for season three will be a long and hard one, but if we start now and keep at it, we will win - no questions asked.

Save The Suite Life of Zack and Cody! ~ STSL.org

Brought to you by SaveDisneyShows.org - Preserving the past to protect the Future!

The Suite Life of Zack and Cody was put on hiatus in the Autumn of 2006 (September 28th, specifically), immediately after the last episode was filmed. This group's owners are "war veterans" of the hugely successful Save Kim Possible and Save Phil of the Future campaign, and know that if we carry over the same creed - persistence, hope, and, of course, peskiness - we can push Disney to get the Suite Life out of hiatus and renew the show for a third season.

It's crucial that we start the fight before the show airs the very final episodes. Because Disney hasn't officially announced the hiatus of this show, many fans won't believe us and won't help. Of course, like any 'crazy' mission, this is to be expected. But consider the following: it's been nearly a year since the first episodes of the second season. If this show were anything like That's So Raven or Hannah Montana, it surely would have had a "third season" announcement by now - fishy, hmm?

It is Save Disney Show's undying belief that having a policy of just sixty-five episodes (which the Suite Life happens to have gone on hiatus after) stifles creativity in addition to being grossly unfair to the fans. That's why the movement continues to ask Disney to formally renounce this informal 65 episode rule - starting with the Suite Life.

A show's fate should be determined by the fans, not a "soulless" company. As long as the Suite Life is popular it deserves to continue on in production. And we invite everyone who enjoys this show (from preteens to adults) to join our cause. The fight for season three will be a long and hard one, but if we start now and keep at it, we will win - no questions asked.

Save The Suite Life of Zack and Cody! ~ STSL.org

Brought to you by SaveDisneyShows.org - Preserving the past to protect the Future!

The Suite Life of Zack and Cody was put on hiatus in the Autumn of 2006 (September 28th, specifically), immediately after the last episode was filmed. This group's owners are "war veterans" of the hugely successful Save Kim Possible and Save Phil of the Future campaign, and know that if we carry over the same creed - persistence, hope, and, of course, peskiness - we can push Disney to get the Suite Life out of hiatus and renew the show for a third season.

It's crucial that we start the fight before the show airs the very final episodes. Because Disney hasn't officially announced the hiatus of this show, many fans won't believe us and won't help. Of course, like any 'crazy' mission, this is to be expected. But consider the following: it's been nearly a year since the first episodes of the second season. If this show were anything like That's So Raven or Hannah Montana, it surely would have had a "third season" announcement by now - fishy, hmm?

It is Save Disney Show's undying belief that having a policy of just sixty-five episodes (which the Suite Life happens to have gone on hiatus after) stifles creativity in addition to being grossly unfair to the fans. That's why the movement continues to ask Disney to formally renounce this informal 65 episode rule - starting with the Suite Life.

A show's fate should be determined by the fans, not a "soulless" company. As long as the Suite Life is popular it deserves to continue on in production. And we invite everyone who enjoys this show (from preteens to adults) to join our cause. The fight for season three will be a long and hard one, but if we start now and keep at it, we will win - no questions asked.

Save The Suite Life of Zack and Cody! ~ STSL.org

Brought to you by SaveDisneyShows.org - Preserving the past to protect the Future!